Giese, Piendak Visit Greenhills' Ohio - A Sister City

by Sandra Barnes

Greenbelt has two sister cities—Greendale, Wisconsin and Greenhills, Ohio—each built by the federal government in 1936. Congress had authorized the construction of four "planned communities" as part of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal relief program during the depression. The fourth town, Greenbrook, New Jersey, was to be located outside of New York City; however, nearby residents opposed the project and Greenbrook was never built.

The objectives of the program were to provide jobs for the unemployed and to supply adequate housing for low income families. The government wanted to locate the new towns in rural areas, but near enough to large cities so that jobs would be available.

Following the International City Manager's Association meeting in Cincinnati in October, City Manager James Giese and Assistant City Manager Dennis Piendak drove the 11 miles for their first visit to Greenhills. The trip along a straight, major highway reminded them very much of the drive to Greenbelt along the Baltimore-Washington Parkway. The Cincinnati-Hamilton Pike joins a minor highway in Greenhills, Winton Road, which existed when Greenhills was constructed. It was retained to provide direct access to the Cincinnati metropolitan area and is now a four lane thoroughfare.

Greenhills now has a population of approximately 7 thousand, as compared to Greenbelt's 20,000. The original community consisted of 676 dwelling units: 112 one-bedroom apartments; 40 two-bedroom apartments; 24 single family homes and 500 row houses. Greenbelt had 574 dwelling units located in row homes, 306 apartments and 5 detached houses built as an experiment in prefabrication. All three towns were models of community planning in that homes, roads, schools, community building, shopping center, utilities were all planned on paper before a spadeful of earth was turned.

Greenhills has no industry and is completely surrounded by a "greenbelt", Winton Woods, which was deeded to the county by the government and hence is protected from development. It still has the original shopping center constructed by the government in 1937, and is predominantly residential. It is now considered upper-middle class, with homes running to $50,000.

Tree Disposal Areas

Christmas trees may be dropped off at the following areas for pick up by the City beginning Jan. 2:

Playground opposite 73 Court Ridge Rd.; corner of Research and Hillside Rd.; playground at Plateau Place and Ridge Rd.; corner of Eastway and Crescent Rd.; entrance to 21 Court of Ridge Rd. (across from Green Ridge House); area adjacent to Candy Cane City; playground at junction of Crescent and Ridge Rds.; and playground at Ivy Lane and Lastner Lane.

Charlestowne Village & Charlestown North - adjacent to Lake Park service road; University Square - in front of swimming pool; Lakeside North - near swimming pool; and Springhill Lake Community Building.

Also Greenbriar - between buildings: 7708 and 7710; 7728 and 7730; 7826 and 7828 Hanover Parkway; between buildings: 8003 and 8009 Mandan Rd.; Glen Oaks - between buildings 7903 and 7905; 7509 and 7511 Mandan Rd. and Windsor Green - adjacent to playground on Canning Terrace.

The streets of Greenhills follow the natural lines of the topography, running along the crests of the ridges, forming a kind of natural superblock and ending in cul de sacs, much as they do in Greenbelt. Sections of the "greenbelt" penetrate into residential blocks, along the course of ravines and heavily wooded areas, adding to the scenic attractiveness of the community and providing space for various types of active and passive recreational enjoyment.

Giese and Piendak first visited the shopping center which, architecturally, is much like the Center, but, even without a mall area is three times as big. Sycamore trees and canopies over some of the shops give one the feel of Greenbelt, Giese commented. The shopping center has two supermarkets, a bakery, hardware store, clothing store, drug store, two service stations, and a bowling alley on the second level below one of the supermarkets. A separate building, apparently built at a later date, appeared to house a toy store.

A community building, used now as a middle school, is located a short distance from the commercial center, behind a large grassy area called a Commons. Normally, no one is permitted to walk on the Commons, but the city has held an annual Festival (art and craft fair) on the Commons for the past few years. An administration building, housing the police force and city offices, also faces the Commons.

Greenhills is an incorporated community and operates a public works department, collects refuse and maintains city parks. The city recently lost its post office, though customer services subsidized by the postal service, are provided in one of the supermarkets by the city.

The city has a mayor-council form of government, with the part-time mayor comparable to Greenbelt's city manager. The mayor was prepared for Giese and Piendak's visit. By an odd coincidence, the city manager of Greendale, Wisconsin had stopped in the town on Sunday on his way to the conference, talked to a policeman, and told the officer he probably would be back on Wednesday. Consequently, when Giese and Piendak showed up on Wednesday, the mayor was ready to greet them.

The most homelike place that made Giese and Piendak almost feel they were back in Greenbelt was the swimming pool, which is almost a carbon copy of Greenbelt's facility. The city owns and maintains a few tennis courts and a golf course; a country club, used for social functions, was built at a later time and is near the golf course. The athletic fields appeared smaller than Braden Field.

The homes in Greenhills are somewhat different from the GHI homes. There is more variety, with individual single-family homes, semi-detached two family homes, group houses for from three to six families, and multi-family housing. It appeared to Giese and Piendak that more exterior remodeling had taken place in Greenhills than in Greenbelt. The mayor told them that shortly after the government sold the houses in 1950, an enterprising contractor came through the area and many people purchased peaked roofs for their flat-roofed homes. Some homes even have columns in the front.

Greenhills lacks an inner walkway system and has no underpasses. Although walkways were planned for each of the "greenbelt" towns, Greenbelt was the only town in which they were actually built because of the high cost of such construction. Hedges were apparently not a part of the landscaping features of Greenhills, as they are in Greenbelt.

Each of the communities was to have a statue. Lenore Thomas's Mother and Child dominates the Center Mall; Greendale has a series of four statues in its center. Although similar statues were intended for Greenhills, the artist commissioned to sculpt the work was fired before they were completed and the pieces wound up in a museum in Toledo.

Giese and Piendak noted another similarity with Greenbelt - narrow streets and an apparent parking problem. Greenhills and the nearby town of Forrest Hills operate their own school system. Greenhills also has a lake, which curves around a large portion of the city and is somewhat larger than Greenbelt's lake.

In 1950, the houses, commercial center, town hall and 601 acres of land were purchased from the government by the Greenhills Home Owners Corporation. However, at some later point the corporation sold the buildings to individuals, while the shopping center is owned by another corporation.

The 2½ hours Giese and Piendak spent in Greenhills were not nearly long enough to explore all the similarities and contrasts, but they took a substantial number of pictures. (This reporter was treated to a private slide show.) They are toying with the idea of arranging a get-together with residents and officials of all three towns to exchange ideas and experiences. Greenbelt makes history buffs of a lot of us.

Council Votes for Replacement of Existing Mobil Gas Stations

by Leta Mach

In a comparatively quick session on December 18 the Greenbelt City Council dealt with several items including a request for a variance from road ordinance requirements and a Mobil Oil request for a special exception. Council also tabled a decision on a petition for rezoning of Smith-Ewing property.

After some discussion and the review of an Advisory Planning Board (APB) report, council unanimously moved to support a new special exception request by Mobil Oil to build a gasoline station to replace the present facility at Crescent and Centerway. The motion also called for the construction of a sidewalk across the entire rear of the property and a low-rise, brick sign provided it was not a traffic safety hazard.

Speaking before council, James Lumsden, real estate representative of Mobil Oil, explained that the new plan eliminates much of the expense of retaining walls and fill. Instead, a ramp will lead around the building to rear parking. The proposed station will have three service bays for repairs and two pump islands—one or both of which could be self-service as determined by the station operator, Lumsden explained. Although much of the area will be taken up with driveway entrances, five feet along the front of the property will be dedicated for sidewalks with ramping for the handicapped. Since the station will be located on it, the existing sidewalk will be eliminated. Lumsden indicated there were no problems with the APB recommendations for a free air pump, and for no disabled vehicles being left outside for more than 72 hours.

The proposed plans provide for a twelve-foot-high sign at the front of the site. APB felt such a sign was unnecessary and Lumsden was agreeable to their recommendation of a low-rise or "monumental" sign instead. City Manager James Giese suggested placing a sign on the canopy which would extend from the station over the pump islands. Councilman Thomas White, however, felt such a sign would not be architecturally pleasing. Council opted for a low-rise sign if it did not affect vision and pose a safety hazard.

Rezoning Petition

In another matter, council moved to table its decision on a rezoning petition for slightly more than five acres of Smith-Ewing property. After learning that the petitioners had not been notified that the matter was on the agenda, councilman Gil Weidenfeld proposed the motion "in view of the fact that council is about to take a negative position." The triangular-shaped property is located south of Greenbelt Road between Hanover Parkway and the future Greenway Shopping Center. Because the item had been on the agenda previously and the Greenway developers, (who have an option to buy the land conditioned upon its rezoning) had appeared before council, White and Mayor Richard Pilski did not support the motion. Giese explained that there was no immediate need for council to take a position.

In previous work sessions, however, a council majority has opposed the rezoning. The land is currently zoned R-R (Rural-Residential) and the petition requests it be zoned C-S-C (Commercial-Shopping-Center). These council members feel that increased development along Greenbelt Road is premature because road facilities are inadequate without the construction of a Greenbelt Road-Kenilworth Avenue interchange.

Other Matters

At Pilski's request, the establishment of a special fund to receive money from the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for an easement through the Lake Park, and any other similar future monies, was on the evening's agenda. However, Giese felt the establishment of a special fund would make it more difficult for accounting purposes and recommended the use of the Capital Improvements Fund. The funds would be accounted for separately and "subject to appropriation purposes determined by the city council." After discussion a motion in support of Giese's recommendation was passed.

Also on the agenda was a request by 11th Springhill Lake Associates for a variance of the road ordinance for driveway entrances. They requested that the entrance to a future motel north of the Beltway off Ivy Lane be constructed like a street intersection instead of the required driveway entrance with a concrete apron. Because it will also be used for the adjacent office-commercial facilities, the entrance is expected to involve much traffic. Giese felt the ordinance might have been written to enable county work crews to distinguish between public and private roadways - a problem he did not feel city crews would have. The permit requires that the intersection be designed so that the water is channeled around the corner instead of across the intersection, thus avoiding problems with ice. Giese recommended approval of the request which council gave.

Near the close of the meeting, council took notice of the proposed Paint-Branch Parkway which would use part of the Rhode Island Avenue right-of-way as a one-way arterial to ease traffic conditions on Route 1. Pilski asked that the municipalities involved be asked to keep Greenbelt informed.

Holiday Post Office Hours

Except for the delivery of special delivery articles, express mail and perishables, no delivery or window service will be provided on Dec. 31, 1978 or Jan. 1, 1979.

Tech. Application Deadline

January 5 is the last day applications will be accepted for the fall, 1979 term of the Science and Technology Center at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Eighth and ninth graders who are enrolled in the Prince Georges County public schools can obtain applications from their junior high school guidance offices. The applications must be completed, signed by the applicant's parents or guardians, and returned no later than January 5.

Students who do not attend the county public schools can obtain the forms from any county junior high school. They will also need an official transcript of their grades for the 1977-78 school year and for the first marking period of this school year.

These should be taken or mailed to: Coordinator, Science and Technology Center, Eleanor Roosevelt High School, 7601 Hanover Parkway, Greenbelt, Md. 20770. (If mailed they should be postmarked no later than January 5.)

There will be approximately 240 openings in the ninth grade next year and a limited number of openings in the tenth grade. Selections will be made on the basis of a competitive examination and the academic records of the students.

Tests

The tests will be given on Saturdays, January 27 and February 3 at Roosevelt, Crossland and Largo high schools. Those unable to take the tests on either of those dates will be able to take it Monday, February 5 at Roosevelt. The test will begin promptly at 10 a.m. and will last approximately an hour. However, students must report to the testing centers no later than 9:30 a.m.

Required four-year sequences of courses will be offered by the Technology Center in the following fields: electrical/electronic, architecture/civil; mechanical/industrial; environmental; and physical and biological sciences.

For those students eligible to apply for the program who will not be available for testing during January or February, school officials have set aside Friday, July 27 as a final make-up test date, with the exams to be administered at 10 a.m. on that day at Largo Senior High School.

CITY NOTES

The general crew spent a couple of days cleaning storm sewers at Greenhill Road and Greenknoll Place and on White Birch Court. Tree roots were blocking both lines. They are now open and draining. Some members of the crew spent some time in the shop working on equipment and some street cleaning was done.

The building maintenance crew has been cleaning all city buildings. Renovation work continues in the police department. The dedication plaque was installed on the new wing of the City office building.

The Parks crew had the leaf vacuum out all week picking up piles of leaves and began cleaning various park areas. More trash receptacles were replaced in various parks. One day was spent making Christmas decorations to be placed in the City Office. Interviews were held this week to fill the empty CETA positions in the Parks Department.

A total of 8 tons and 1,420 lbs. of newspapers were picked up.

Provisional Licenses

Beginning January 2, the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration will issue provisional driver's licenses, an intermediate step between a learner's permit and a regular driver's license that will be required of persons 16 years of age as of January 1, 1979.

Senate Bill 344, enacted at the 1978 session of the General Assembly, which created the provisional phase, also prohibits a person holding a provisional license from driving during the hours of 1 a.m. to 6 a.m., unless accompanied by a licensed driver who is at least 21 years old.

To obtain his regular license, the provisional licensee must maintain a 'clean' driving record for six months. A conviction on a moving violation will automatically restart the six-month provisional period.

To advance from a learner's permit to a provisional license, the licensee will be subject to the same rules that currently apply to obtain a standard passenger vehicle license: he must be at least 16 years old, have completed an approved course of driver education, and pass the actual on-road portion of the driver's test. Applicants for learner's permits will still be required to pass the vision and law ("written") parts of the driver's test. Senate Bill 344 also lowered the minimum age required to apply for a learner's permit from 16 years to 15 years and 9 months.

Upon reaching age 18 (which is the same age that a person can obtain a Maryland driver's license without driver education) under the new law, a youth will no longer be subject to the provisional license requirement and thus will be eligible for a regular license.

The new law is intended to cut down the disproportionate accident rate of 16 and 17-year olds by introducing young people to driving in a more gradual, deliberate manner, and to raise the level of parental consciousness. Two handbooks have been specially prepared for parents, one to be used by parents while their teenager has a learner's permit and the other while the teenager has a provisional license.

Police Blotter

The Department is investigating the second murder reported in the City in three years. The incident took place in the parking lot at the American Legion Wednesday night. A 56 year old man, a non-resident was pronounced dead of stab wounds at Prince George's General Hospital. A 48 year old non-resident male was apprehended at the scene and has been charged with first degree murder. He has been incarcerated without bond.

Two girls reported as runaways from the Eastern Shore area were apprehended after they also ran from Juvenile Services Office on Cherrywood Lane. They were transported to Cheltenham where they were incarcerated to await Juvenile Court action.

Three non-residents, two adults and one juvenile, were apprehended and charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle. The three were observed operating the vehicle in a negligent manner. They had apparently just stolen the vehicle from Edmonston Road. The operator was also charged with driving while intoxicated. The juvenile was transported to Cheltenham where he was detained, the two adults were transported to Hyattsville; one was incarcerated in lieu of $500, the other was released on personal recognizance. A fourth youth fled the vehicle and was not apprehended.

The police entrance exam was given by Chief Lane on Dec. 15. Thirty-eight applicants for the police officer position that becomes available January 1 took the exam. The answer sheets have been taken to the International Association of Chiefs of Police to be corrected and the grades will be returned. The grades will then be used as guides in contacting applicants for interviews.

The annual school patrol holiday party was held Wednesday, December 20 at the Fire House. One hundred forty patrols attended the party. All were welcomed by Chief Lane and Cpl. Stair. A Laurel & Hardy movie and a Walt Disney cartoon show were shown. Each patrol received a gift and refreshments from the Department for a job well done during the year.

Dial 911 for Fire/Rescue

by Wayne Lewis

Once again, as the year comes to an end, we all will be celebrating the start of a new year. As we share in this celebration with many other people throughout the nation, keep in mind some items on fire prevention as you make your resolutions for 1979.

Does your home have a working smoke detection device installed? Have you planned for an emergency escape (two different routes)? What is the emergency telephone number for fire or rescue assistance? Do you practice fire safety in your home by the way in which you live? Include at least one of these safety ideas in your resolutions for next year and practice fire safety habits.

Also, remember as you return from your New Year celebration to be especially careful of other drivers and pedestrians. Many may celebrate a little too much and may not be aware of others around them.

NEW YEAR'S EVE DANCE

There will be a New Year's Eve Dance on Sunday, December 31 at St. Hugh's Grenoble Hall, 135 Crescent Rd. Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. with music by 'The Embers'. Included is a Continental breakfast. For ticket information call Rose or Bill McCloskey 474-3766 or Dan Dambraskas, 474-8821.

Greenbelt CARES

On December 21, JoAnn Parochetti, attended the first County-sponsored training for supervisors of Comprehensive and Educational Training Act (CETA) participants in youth programs. This training was the culmination of a proposal made by JoAnn to the County Youth Programs Committee, and is thought to be unique in CETA operations. The supervisors' training will become an on-going program this year and is expected to result in better direct services to CETA enrollees.

Another member of CARES' General Equivalency Diploma (GED) class received his high school diploma this month, passing with very high scores!

Geography Course on T.V.

"Of Earth & Man," a three-credit World Geography course will be offered by Prince Georges Community College beginning Jan. 29. The thirty half-hour lessons will be seen on WAPB Channel 22 of the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting Mondays and Wednesdays at 6 p.m. Lessons will be repeated back-to-back on Saturdays at 10 a.m.

The program will combine films, photographs, and artwork to reflect the theme of synthesis. Some of the lessons feature recent film footage of the world's remote inhabitants as well as depictions of contemporary urban societies.

For information on how to register for this geography course, call the Telecredit Office at 336-6000, ext. 407 or 336-0466.
